Griner to Dedicate New Marshall Exhibit at Space & Rocket Center

Acting Center Director Carolyn Griner will introduce Rad 1, NASA's new and "radical" exhibit staffer, during a dedication ceremony at 1 p.m. Monday, July 20, at the U.S. Space & Rocket Center. Griner also will recognize Marshall employees and contractors who breathed "life" into the mechanical man. Rad 1, a computer-programmed robot, extends a warm welcome to museum visitors and interacts with Marshall employees who appear on video screens positioned above him.

Exciting Activities Planned for Marshall Center Picnic Aug. 22

This year's Marshall Center Picnic is being held 4-9 p.m. Saturday, Aug. 22, at the U.S. Space & Rocket Center. In addition to free museum admission, Center employees, on-site contractors and retirees will have the opportunity to view the IMAX theater presentation "Mission to Mir," ride Space Shot and see a fireworks display. More information is on the "Inside Marshall" page under "Headlines" or by typing picnic98 in your browser.

'KSAs' Topic of July 21 Workshop

A "Knowledge, Skills and Abilities (KSAs)" workshop is set for 9 a.m.-noon July 21 in Bldg. 4200, room G-13. This workshop, sponsored by Marshall's Career Transition Assistance Program Center, is designed to prepare participants to complete competitive KSA statements when responding to a federal job announcement. Civil service employees and spouses are invited.
